If it works for burgers and fries, why not for palms on Palm Sunday?

Drive-through services have become all the rage during the pandemic, and First Congregational Church in Port Washington has taken them to new levels this Easter season, first by offering drive-through ashes on Ash Wednesday, then by distributing palms as members of the congregation drove through the church parking lot on Palm Sunday. Handing fronds, as well as cinnamon rolls, to Richard "Lefty" and Diane Fowler on Sunday was Marti DeMario, a member of the church's Fellowship Team.
